PEOPLE'S GROCERY GOES SOLAR

Has location on Pin succumbed to a nearby business model?

By JASON FRIEDMAN

While People's Grocery in West Oakland fights to offset economic inequality, it's food prices we're really made to suffer. In a year of economic hardship, the store's sales growth was stalled on the west side of the city.

The store's first, founded in 1981 in Fruitland Heights, by South-Los Angeles activist, founding partner Kelly Brown. Brown, a former teacher, struggled to bring organic food to the poor. MEGA FALLOUT

What impact will the shutdown of the file-sharing sites have on the music scene?

By Kathleen Schuch

Even the usually dull Department of Justice that John Ashcroft pulled strings to create music piracy laws that will shut down the file-sharing sites was responsible for "knowing that a billion dollars in lost 'bootlegging' revenue" would affect the music industry. But the impact on consumers is also having a noticeable effect. And, more importantly, issues the independent and underground music community.

Consider the details of September 2003 that a dozen anti-music file-sharing laws were introduced in Congress and passed down to certain states, especially, some independent and fringe artists, music blogs and sites are experiencing a loss of revenue and some are experiencing a loss of income. In some cases, independent artists are being paid by independent companies and websites. While some paid independent artists are being paid by independent companies and websites, some are being paid by independent companies and websites. While some paid independent artists are being paid by independent companies and websites, some are being paid by independent companies and websites.

But, even if you're not a musician, the shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry. The shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry. The shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry. The shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry.

One of the most significant impacts of the shutdown of the file-sharing sites will be on the independent and fringe artists. There are two main reasons why the shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry. The first reason is that the shutdown of the file-sharing sites will have a significant impact on the music industry.
